GOOD EMPLOYMENT CHARTER

One of our founding members

Founded in 2016, Rising Arts Agency is a powerful, collaborative community of artists and creatives who have come together to create social change. The team comprises of driven, young individuals, with a diverse skill set.

Their primary objective is to 'empower underrepresented young people to fulfil their creative ambitions and make social change happen'. The foundation of this organisation lies in the community of individuals who work for Rising Arts Agency, playing a pivotal role in shaping all the incredible work they do.

'Undertaking the process of becoming a member was incredibly insightful to us. It gave us an opportunity to showcase all the work we are doing and we're incredibly proud of that.

The Charter team were really helpful throughout the entire process and open to feedback on how the process could be improved. It very much felt like we were a partnership working towards the same goal, of improving employment practices within the region.

We're really excited to be one of the businesses leading the positive change of better environmental practices in the region. Being a Member of the Charter will enable us to continue developing and improving our internal working practices with tailored guidance and tools from the experts at the West of England Mayoral Combined Authority.'

THE NATIONAL CENTRE FOR INTEGRATIVE MEDICINE (NCIM) CIC

The National Centre for Integrative Medicine (NCIM) CIC is a community interest company with a vision to support the transformation of healthcare to a broad model including conventional, lifestyle and holistic approaches.

They wanted to understand better the extent of their IP assets and ways to protect their academic programmes in an increasingly competitive environment and this led them to seek an IP Audit. The audit prompted a review of all their contracts of employment and with suppliers to ensure that copyright was retained by NCIM. They have also now asserted their copyright on all training materials and on their website.

They used follow-on grant funding to file Trademark applications in the UK and Europe to protect the NCIM brand. They are also sharing their IP knowledge with partners, so the benefits will be shared more widely.

Dr Elizabeth Thompson, Chief Executive of NCIM

“ Protecting our Intellectual Property had been on our ‘To Do’ list for some time, and the availability of the IP for Growth grant spurred us to do the necessary research and apply. We have used the Audit to create an IP Management Plan which we are now working through. As an organisation we have gained a lot more knowledge of IP and are pleased to be able to share this with some of our charitable partners. ”

SKILLS BOOTCAMP

Supporting business recovery and growth

During the Covid pandemic, Ellie held a demanding position within the NHS, braving the high pressures of the healthcare environment.

However, with the joyful news of her pregnancy, Ellie decided it was time to embark on a career transition after her maternity leave. Ellie wanted to create a better balance between her professional pursuits and the needs of her growing family.

After some research, Ellie decided to complete a Skills Bootcamp in HGV driving. The Skills Bootcamp course was flexible and Ellie was able to fit it easily around family life.

In Ellie's new role, her salary is the same as her and her partner's combined take-home pay had been when the pair had both been working full-time in previous roles.

Ellie says, "Skills Bootcamp has given our family a better way of life".

Her partner is now a full-time stay at home parent whilst she works full time, and another bonus has been that her children feel that "she is a super cool Mum now that she's driving lorries."

BUSINESS INNOVATION FUND

Supporting business recovery and growth

Gritty Talent had identified that small production businesses lacked the knowledge and reporting mechanisms to meet the equality, diversity and inclusion (ED&I) requirements consistently. They therefore wanted to explore how Artificial Intelligence (AI) could be used to improve the process. The idea of the Inclusion Accelerator was to disrupt how the UK's TV and film companies act on their ED&I and talent challenges through data science-led R&D and contribute to a much-needed transformation of representation in the media. Gritty Talent was awarded a £30,000 grant from the Business Innovation Fund to support their research.

Melanie Rodrigues, CEO and Founder, says; "One of the problems we found was the inconsistency with which government bodies and national organisations collect data around protected characteristics, making it difficult to establish benchmarks. We are now using the evidence we have gained to consolidate and standardise good practice in ED&I within the film and TV sectors.

We feel that this R&D project has been a resounding success. We have achieved proof of concept, increased the automation of our workflow and gained valuable market insights, improving our staff's expertise. We plan to share this learning to promote understanding and help drive up commitment to ED&I with our clients.

We also have a product that is suitable for trademarking and have laid the groundwork for a second product."

LOW CARBON BUSINESS SUPPORT: JAM INN'S ICE DELIVERY

Based in Fishponds, Bristol, Jam Inns Ice Delivery is an ice producer and supplier for businesses and events. Having previously run a business in the hospitality sector, owner James Maloney recognised a demand for an ice delivery service in the South-West. They are now the region's largest supplier.

The team recognised that they were producing a lot of carbon and their processes ended up costing the business a lot of money. They therefore decided to undertake a carbon survey, from the West of England Mayoral Combined Authority. The survey highlighted the main difficulty was that the warehouse regularly overheated, leading to the constant use of an extract fan to cool it down and draw in fresh air. On occasion, this had also resulted in James running the ice machines overnight when it was cooler, including sleeping in the warehouse while the roller shutter was up to let the heat out!

The overheating was originally believed to be caused by inefficient ice machines which emitted heat into the warehouse. But with the sun hitting the south-facing metal roller shutter most of the day and with no insulation installed, this was acting like a giant radiator, lifting the internal temperature to over 30 degrees on sunny days. The warm internal temperatures were likely to be challenging the walk-in freezers too, reducing their efficiency and increasing energy use. Jam Inns were awarded a Green Business Grant of nearly £15,000 from the Mayoral Combined Authority to install an insulated roller shutter, replace fluorescent lighting with LEDs and install a 23kWp Solar PV array on the roof. As well as the financial and carbon savings, the impact on the business has been life-changing. The warehouse no longer overheats and remains comfortable all year round due to the insulated shutter and replacement ice machine. Now instead of working overnight, James makes use of free solar energy, has shifted production to the daytime and spends his evenings at home!

James Maloney

“ Within a couple of years, I was supplying to many of the sites at Glastonbury Festival, Stadium events across the south-west, many bars, restaurants and event companies... the phone didn't stop ringing for ice deliveries. ”
